

NEW YORK STOP ITSKY, PICKPOCKET, IS AGAIN CAUGHT

Mrs. Yetta Green Released in $1,000 Bail, With Other Charges Hanging Over Her

WOMAN JEKYL AND HYDE

Maintains Fine Home While Going About, in Disguise at Picking Pockets.

Mrs. Yetta Green, recorded in the "rallies" of the New York, Philadelphia and Brooklyn police as "Itsky's Widow, the Millionaire Booster," is again in a fair way of slipping out of the police toils in the mystic manner that has marked her career ever since she married Itsky, the most prosperous pickpocket in America.

Having served a two-year term in the Allderton Penitentiary and paid various brief visits to Blackwell's Island, she is again in the city alone that day, a police record in this city alone that she is a "bad long." Mrs. Green was released yesterday under $1,000 bail after being arraigned before Magistrate Butts in the Harlem Police Court on a charge of grand larceny.

Magistrate Butts held this owner of a multitude of bank accounts for the grand jury. Jan. 1 this year she was arrested for grand larceny in Brooklyn and the case is still enmeshed in some impenetrable cobweb, undisposed of. As Minnie Cohen she was again arrested, on Aug. 20 on a similar charge, again nothing doing. Just before that, on Aug. 8, she was arrested in Manhattan on a charge of grand larceny under the name of Minnie Kahn and once more nothing doing.

WIND HER PSEUDONYM BY CALLING HER A PICKPOCKET.
Mrs. Green at times won her pseudonym of "Millionaire Booster" after a long career as a shoplifter, but recently she has come back to the profession—her husband taught her and holds the record for being the most expert "dip" in the country. The police say that she could pick a double-pocketed pocket of a man with one hundred eyes and get away with it.

She is credited with getting away with many thousand such "pippings." Her recent arrest was an interesting bit of police work as Inspector Hughes can recall. While Lieut. Brown in the East One Hundred and Fourth street station was listening to the tale of woe of a woman who had been robbed while marketing a Mrs. Newman wrote to Inspector Hughes that she had witnessed a very strange thing.

"For several days past," said Mrs. Newman, "I have noticed in several ash cans a lot of pocketbooks and purses. I could not account for them until I saw a shabby dressed woman throw two pocketbooks away. I kept watch and saw her do it again and again. Now this is very peculiar, for many of my customers are telling me of their pocketbooks being mysteriously robbed."

Inspector Hughes sent this letter to Lieut. Brown and suggested that he come down to Police Headquarters and get a photograph of Yetta Green.

"Looks like our millionaire booster again," said Hughes.

Brown got the photograph, and Mrs. Newman at once identified it as the woman she had seen throwing away the empty pocketbooks. Two policemen were assigned to the case and they arrested Yetta in the act of taking $5 from the handbag of Mrs. Maria Russo of No. 1764 Madison avenue. At least the policeman and Mrs. Russo swore to the theft.

Visualization of this Yetta of the many aliases through the police focus presented her in the guise of a port of feminine Jekyll and Hyde. At home, in the bosom of her large family she appears in the role of the capricious housewife and fond mother, providing her children with many luxuries, fitting out her apartments with all the comforts money can buy, dressing in rich silks and flashing the wealth of jewels from her long bony fingers.

Neighbors who have lived in close intimacy with this Mrs. Yetta Green for many years have been impressed by her seeming benevolence of character, hearing of her charities to those of her own race, and seeing her girded about by every evidence of respectability.

But this is not the Mrs. Yetta Green. Weiss-Lehman-Cohen-Schlesel, stilling out of the police courts any more than the courtly philanthropic and kind Mrs. Jekyll was the cringing, prowling brutal Mrs. Hyde. While no mystic drug induces in the transformation of this amazing woman, she manages to metamorphose herself by means of subtle disguises.

The police insist that it has always been her custom to maintain a furnished room near her luxurious homes in which she wrought her transformations, discarding her rich garments for the worn and threadbare clothing of the poor housewives of the squalid tenements, covering her head and shoulders with a shawl and carrying a dilapidated bag of the kind that are commonly seen in the thronged passageways of the east side.

DISGUISE MAKES IT EASY TO PREY UPON WOMEN.

The identity of the wealthy Mrs. Yetta Green is completely merged in this disguise, and she is able to glide about in the press of bargain-hunting marketeers without attracting the slightest attention. She possesses astounding cunning, say the detectives, and can spot in a flash the thrifty housewife who fears to leave her money or jewelry at home, carrying it outwards with her in pocket or handbag.

There has been no end of such victims of the nimble-fingered Yetta, declare the detectives, and for many years the neighborhoods she has haunted have rung with the complaints of the robbed. Before the last arrest of this so-called millionaire woman pickpocket Lieut. William J. Brown of the East One Hundred and Fourth street station received fifty complaints from women who said they had been robbed in Harlem stores within immediate radius of Mrs. Yetta Green's most recent home.

When she was arrested a week ago by Patrolmen Marchant and Walsh she was living with her five children at No. 215 East One Hundred and Seventeenth street. On Tuesday last she and her five children moved out of this apartment house without leaving a trace. Yetta Green is No. 325 of the local Rogues' Gallery. It was as Yetta Lieber that she was arrested in Allentown, Pa., in November, 1901, and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. At that time her husband, Itsky Green, was accumulating real estate wholesale in Manhattan. Nine years passed before this amazing woman's second conviction, though she was arrested early and often in between.

WOMAN JEKYL AND HYDE WHO IS AGAIN ACCUSED.

YETTA GREEN.

SENTENCED TO BLACKWELL'S ISLAND FOR THREE MONTHS.

In March, 1909, she was sent to Blackwell's Island for three months from this city. As Minnie Schessel she was arrested for grand larceny in Trenton, but even there her strange methods of pull got to work. She was released under a bail bond. Jumped the bond and now that case is recorded in police annals as "not wanted."

As Minnie Robinson she was arrested as a suspicious person in February, 1907, and discharged. Three weeks later she was arrested again and discharged. As Minnie Cohen she was arrested in October, 1907, and discharged. Her arrest as Becky Brenner on June 23, 1910, furnished a sensation. The police alleged they had a mighty strong case. But when she came up in the Essex Market Court the accusers let down their strong case so precipitately that all the Magistrate could do was to send the prisoner to Blackwell's Island for three months.

Rumors were spread that Yetta had paid $1,000 to "fix" the case. Two detectives were brought up on charges and reduced from the rank of first grade detectives to patrolmen, which meant a reduction in their pay of $100 a year. After being released from the island Yetta remained in seclusion until her recent arrest, but her activities, the police say, were continued immediately after her release.

With a woman of her wealth should come to take such risks for mere pittance of plunder most of the time presents a strange psychological problem. Her five children range in age from two to eighteen years, the eldest a girl. They have always been provided with handsome homes and the other children are well educated, some of them having had private instruction at home.

In the later years of his life Itsky Green was a professional bondman. In this way he was said to have powerful "police connections" and he was able to pass on to his wife. This may account for much that is dark and seamy in the police record of Yetta Green.

GAS PRESIDENT STARTS THE GIANT ELECTRIC DYNAMO

George B. Cortelyou Turns Crank and Great Turbine Begins to Buzz.

30,000 HORSE POWER.

One Machine More Powerful Than Combined Engines of the Big Fleet.

When George B. Cortelyou, former Secretary of the Treasury and now President of the Consolidated Gas Company, turned a switch in the Waterside generation station of the New York Edison Company, at Thirty-eighth street and First avenue, to-day, there was placed in operation, for the first time, the largest steam turbine engine for the generation of electric current in the world.

At a total expenditure of $1,000,000 the Edison Company is to install three of these generating machines of gigantic power, within the next six months, to replace eleven huge vertical engines, which, six years ago, represented the highest standard of efficiency in the world for the generation of electric current. The first of these three machines, put in operation to-day, replaces four of the vertical engines, the one machine having a capacity of 30,000 kilowatts, as compared with a total capacity of 14,000 kilowatts for the four machines replaced.

Dramatically impressive was the starting of the giant machine upon its work of furnishing a large part of New York City with electric current. To demonstrate the great capacity of the engine, the seven huge vertical engines that still remain in use were slowly stopped, one by one, after Mr. Cortelyou had set the new apparatus in motion, and within half an hour the great turbine engine had assumed the entire "load" of the seven vertical engines and was turning out alone electric current equal to that which they had supplied.

GREAT TURBINE HAS A 30,000 HORSE-POWER CAPACITY.

This was the Edison Company's practical demonstration of the great strides that have been made in the last few years in the development of electrical machinery. The area occupied by the one enormously efficient engine is less than one-fourth of the floor space of the seven great machines whose work it took up with the greatest ease.

The great new turbine has a capacity for the generation of 30,000 horsepower current, sufficient to supply alone the needs of a city of 20,000 population, or a chain of cities such as Albany, Syracuse and Utica. The engine's power is equal to that of the largest ocean liner, to that of thirty of the largest express locomotives or to a line of horses, six abreast and ten miles long. Another interesting comparison of the new engine's enormous power is with that of the engines of the battleship fleet which yesterday cleared New York Harbor.

The total power of the engines of the entire fleet is 27,000 horsepower, which is 3,000 horsepower less than that of the new Edison engine.

The unit machines, as the big steam turbine is known, cost $750,000 each—and the extra cost of installing the three will bring the total expenditure to $3,000,000. The second new engine will be started early this winter and the third in the spring.

Other interesting facts about the new engine, which was manufactured by the General Electric Company, are: Dimensions, 11 feet 6 inches by 17 feet; height, 35 feet 7 inches; area occupied, 297 square feet; speed, 750 revolutions per minute; weight of machine, 420 tons; weight of heaviest piece, 110 tons; diameter of wheels, 13 feet; steam used per day, 17,200,000 pounds; power sufficient to light simultaneously 1,000,000 sixteen-candlepower incandescent lights.

It had been planned to have Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, start the new machine, but Mr. Edison is confined to his home in East Orange, N. J., by a severe cold, which he contracted while visiting the battleships.

MANY PROMINENT PERSONS WITNESSED THE START.

Numerous persons prominent in electrical and engineering circles were present to witness the engine's starting. Among them were N. F. Brady, First Vice-President of the New York Edison Company; J. W. Lieb, Third Vice-President of the company; Arthur Williams, the company's general agent; F. C. Lacombe, Chief Engineer of the City Department of Light, Water and Electrical Supply; F. C. Simpson, Secretary of the Consolidated Gas Company; Robert H. Taft, Chief Inspector of the City Department of Construction and Maintenance; and F. J. McGuire, Chief Inspector of the City Department of Lighting.

A luncheon cooked by current generated from the new engine was served the visitors after the machine was started.

Iron-worker Falls to Death.

Daniel Blakeley, an iron-worker at work on the third floor of a new building at Eighth avenue and Thirty-second street, this afternoon missed his footing and fell to the ground. He died on his way to the hospital. The dead man was forty years old and lived at No. 32 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street.

WOMAN JEKYL AND HYDE WHO IS AGAIN ACCUSED.

Mrs. Yetta Green Released in $1,000 Bail, With Other Charges Hanging Over Her

WOMAN JEKYL AND HYDE

Maintains Fine Home While Going About, in Disguise at Picking Pockets.

Mrs. Yetta Green, recorded in the "rallies" of the New York, Philadelphia and Brooklyn police as "Itsky's Widow, the Millionaire Booster," is again in a fair way of slipping out of the police toils in the mystic manner that has marked her career ever since she married Itsky, the most prosperous pickpocket in America.

Having served a two-year term in the Allderton Penitentiary and paid various brief visits to Blackwell's Island, she is again in the city alone that day, a police record in this city alone that she is a "bad long." Mrs. Green was released yesterday under $1,000 bail after being arraigned before Magistrate Butts in the Harlem Police Court on a charge of grand larceny.

Magistrate Butts held this owner of a multitude of bank accounts for the grand jury. Jan. 1 this year she was arrested for grand larceny in Brooklyn and the case is still enmeshed in some impenetrable cobweb, undisposed of. As Minnie Cohen she was again arrested, on Aug. 20 on a similar charge, again nothing doing. Just before that, on Aug. 8, she was arrested in Manhattan on a charge of grand larceny under the name of Minnie Kahn and once more nothing doing.

WIND HER PSEUDONYM BY CALLING HER A PICKPOCKET.
Mrs. Green at times won her pseudonym of "Millionaire Booster" after a long career as a shoplifter, but recently she has come back to the profession—her husband taught her and holds the record for being the most expert "dip" in the country. The police say that she could pick a double-pocketed pocket of a man with one hundred eyes and get away with it.

She is credited with getting away with many thousand such "pippings." Her recent arrest was an interesting bit of police work as Inspector Hughes can recall. While Lieut. Brown in the East One Hundred and Fourth street station was listening to the tale of woe of a woman who had been robbed while marketing a Mrs. Newman wrote to Inspector Hughes that she had witnessed a very strange thing.

"For several days past," said Mrs. Newman, "I have noticed in several ash cans a lot of pocketbooks and purses. I could not account for them until I saw a shabby dressed woman throw two pocketbooks away. I kept watch and saw her do it again and again. Now this is very peculiar, for many of my customers are telling me of their pocketbooks being mysteriously robbed."

Inspector Hughes sent this letter to Lieut. Brown and suggested that he come down to Police Headquarters and get a photograph of Yetta Green.

"Looks like our millionaire booster again," said Hughes.

Brown got the photograph, and Mrs. Newman at once identified it as the woman she had seen throwing away the empty pocketbooks. Two policemen were assigned to the case and they arrested Yetta in the act of taking $5 from the handbag of Mrs. Maria Russo of No. 1764 Madison avenue. At least the policeman and Mrs. Russo swore to the theft.

Visualization of this Yetta of the many aliases through the police focus presented her in the guise of a port of feminine Jekyll and Hyde. At home, in the bosom of her large family she appears in the role of the capricious housewife and fond mother, providing her children with many luxuries, fitting out her apartments with all the comforts money can buy, dressing in rich silks and flashing the wealth of jewels from her long bony fingers.

Neighbors who have lived in close intimacy with this Mrs. Yetta Green for many years have been impressed by her seeming benevolence of character, hearing of her charities to those of her own race, and seeing her girded about by every evidence of respectability.

But this is not the Mrs. Yetta Green. Weiss-Lehman-Cohen-Schlesel, stilling out of the police courts any more than the courtly philanthropic and kind Mrs. Jekyll was the cringing, prowling brutal Mrs. Hyde. While no mystic drug induces in the transformation of this amazing woman, she manages to metamorphose herself by means of subtle disguises.

The police insist that it has always been her custom to maintain a furnished room near her luxurious homes in which she wrought her transformations, discarding her rich garments for the worn and threadbare clothing of the poor housewives of the squalid tenements, covering her head and shoulders with a shawl and carrying a dilapidated bag of the kind that are commonly seen in the thronged passageways of the east side.

DISGUISE MAKES IT EASY TO PREY UPON WOMEN.

The identity of the wealthy Mrs. Yetta Green is completely merged in this disguise, and she is able to glide about in the press of bargain-hunting marketeers without attracting the slightest attention. She possesses astounding cunning, say the detectives, and can spot in a flash the thrifty housewife who fears to leave her money or jewelry at home, carrying it outwards with her in pocket or handbag.

There has been no end of such victims of the nimble-fingered Yetta, declare the detectives, and for many years the neighborhoods she has haunted have rung with the complaints of the robbed. Before the last arrest of this so-called millionaire woman pickpocket Lieut. William J. Brown of the East One Hundred and Fourth street station received fifty complaints from women who said they had been robbed in Harlem stores within immediate radius of Mrs. Yetta Green's most recent home.

When she was arrested a week ago by Patrolmen Marchant and Walsh she was

WOMAN JEKYL AND HYDE WHO IS AGAIN ACCUSED.

Mrs. Yetta Green Released in $1,000 Bail, With Other Charges Hanging Over Her

WOMAN JEKYL AND HYDE

Maintains Fine Home While Going About, in Disguise at Picking Pockets.

Mrs. Yetta Green, recorded in the "rallies" of the New York, Philadelphia and Brooklyn police as "Itsky's Widow, the Millionaire Booster," is again in a fair way of slipping out of the police toils in the mystic manner that has marked her career ever since she married Itsky, the most prosperous pickpocket in America.

Having served a two-year term in the Allderton Penitentiary and paid various brief visits to Blackwell's Island, she is again in the city alone that day, a police record in this city alone that she is a "bad long." Mrs. Green was released yesterday under $1,000 bail after being arraigned before Magistrate Butts in the Harlem Police Court on a charge of grand larceny.

Magistrate Butts held this owner of a multitude of bank accounts for the grand jury. Jan. 1 this year she was arrested for grand larceny in Brooklyn and the case is still enmeshed in some impenetrable cobweb, undisposed of. As Minnie Cohen she was again arrested, on Aug. 20 on a similar charge, again nothing doing. Just before that, on Aug. 8, she was arrested in Manhattan on a charge of grand larceny under the name of Minnie Kahn and once more nothing doing.

WIND HER PSEUDONYM BY CALLING HER A PICKPOCKET.
Mrs. Green at times won her pseudonym of "Millionaire Booster" after a long career as a shoplifter, but recently she has come back to the profession—her husband taught her and holds the record for being the most expert "dip" in the country. The police say that she could pick a double-pocketed pocket of a man with one hundred eyes and get away with it.

She is credited with getting away with many thousand such "pippings." Her recent arrest was an interesting bit of police work as Inspector Hughes can recall. While Lieut. Brown in the East One Hundred and Fourth street station was listening to the tale of woe of a woman who had been robbed while marketing a Mrs. Newman wrote to Inspector Hughes that she had witnessed a very strange thing.

"For several days past," said Mrs. Newman, "I have noticed in several ash cans a lot of pocketbooks and purses. I could not account for them until I saw a shabby dressed woman throw two pocketbooks away. I kept watch and saw her do it again and again. Now this is very peculiar, for many of my customers are telling me of their pocketbooks being mysteriously robbed."

Inspector Hughes sent this letter to Lieut. Brown and suggested that he come down to Police Headquarters and get a photograph of Yetta Green.

"Looks like our millionaire booster again," said Hughes.

Brown got the photograph, and Mrs. Newman at once identified it as the woman she had seen throwing away the empty pocketbooks. Two policemen were assigned to the case and they arrested Yetta in the act of taking $5 from the handbag of Mrs. Maria Russo of No. 1764 Madison avenue. At least the policeman and Mrs. Russo swore to the theft.

Visualization of this Yetta of the many aliases through the police focus presented her in the guise of a port of feminine Jekyll and Hyde. At home, in the bosom of her large family she appears in the role of the capricious housewife and fond mother, providing her children with many luxuries, fitting out her apartments with all the comforts money can buy, dressing in rich silks and flashing the wealth of jewels from her long bony fingers.

Neighbors who have lived in close intimacy with this Mrs. Yetta Green for many years have been impressed by her seeming benevolence of character, hearing of her charities to those of her own race, and seeing her girded about by every evidence of respectability.

But this is not the Mrs. Yetta Green. Weiss-Lehman-Cohen-Schlesel, stilling out of the police courts any more than the courtly philanthropic and kind Mrs. Jekyll was the cringing, prowling brutal Mrs. Hyde. While no mystic drug induces in the transformation of this amazing woman, she manages to metamorphose herself by means of subtle disguises.

The police insist that it has always been her custom to maintain a furnished room near her luxurious homes in which she wrought her transformations, discarding her rich garments for the worn and threadbare clothing of the poor housewives of the squalid tenements, covering her head and shoulders with a shawl and carrying a dilapidated bag of the kind that are commonly seen in the thronged passageways of the east side.

DISGUISE MAKES IT EASY TO PREY UPON WOMEN.

The identity of the wealthy Mrs. Yetta Green is completely merged in this disguise, and she is able to glide about in the press of bargain-hunting marketeers without attracting the slightest attention. She possesses astounding cunning, say the detectives, and can spot in a flash the thrifty housewife who fears to leave her money or jewelry at home, carrying it outwards with her in pocket or handbag.

There has been no end of such victims of the nimble-fingered Yetta, declare the detectives, and for many years the neighborhoods she has haunted have rung with the complaints of the robbed. Before the last arrest of this so-called millionaire woman pickpocket Lieut. William J. Brown of the East One Hundred and Fourth street station received fifty complaints from women who said they had been robbed in Harlem stores within immediate radius of Mrs. Yetta Green's most recent home.

When she was arrested a week ago by Patrolmen Marchant and Walsh she was

WOMAN JEKYL AND HYDE WHO IS AGAIN ACCUSED.

Mrs. Yetta Green Released in $1,000 Bail, With Other Charges Hanging Over Her

WOMAN JEKYL AND HYDE

Maintains Fine Home While Going About, in Disguise at Picking Pockets.

Mrs. Yetta Green, recorded in the "rallies" of the New York, Philadelphia and Brooklyn police as "Itsky's Widow, the Millionaire Booster," is again in a fair way of slipping out of the police toils in the mystic manner that has marked her career ever since she married Itsky, the most prosperous pickpocket in America.

Having served a two-year term in the Allderton Penitentiary and paid various brief visits to Blackwell's Island, she is again in the city alone that day, a police record in this city alone that she is a "bad long." Mrs. Green was released yesterday under $1,000 bail after being arraigned before Magistrate Butts in the Harlem Police Court on a charge of grand larceny.

Magistrate Butts held this owner of a multitude of bank accounts for the grand jury. Jan. 1 this year she was arrested for grand larceny in Brooklyn and the case is still enmeshed in some impenetrable cobweb, undisposed of. As Minnie Cohen she was again arrested, on Aug. 20 on a similar charge, again nothing doing. Just before that, on Aug. 8, she was arrested in Manhattan on a charge of grand larceny under the name of Minnie Kahn and once more nothing doing.

WIND HER PSEUDONYM BY CALLING HER A PICKPOCKET.
Mrs. Green at times won her pseudonym of "Millionaire Booster" after a long career as a shoplifter, but recently she has come back to the profession—her husband taught her and holds the record for being the most expert "dip" in the country. The police say that she could pick a double-pocketed pocket of a man with one hundred eyes and get away with it.

She is credited with getting away with many thousand such "pippings." Her recent arrest was an interesting bit of police work as Inspector Hughes can recall. While Lieut. Brown in the East One Hundred and Fourth street station was listening to the tale of woe of a woman who had been robbed while marketing a Mrs. Newman wrote to Inspector Hughes that she had witnessed a very strange thing.

"For several days past," said Mrs. Newman, "I have noticed in several ash cans a lot of pocketbooks and purses. I could not account for them until I saw a shabby dressed woman throw two pocketbooks away. I kept watch and saw her do it again and again. Now this is very peculiar, for many of my customers are telling me of their pocketbooks being mysteriously robbed."

Inspector Hughes sent this letter to Lieut. Brown and suggested that he come down to Police Headquarters and get a photograph of Yetta Green.

"Looks like our millionaire booster again," said Hughes.

Brown got the photograph, and Mrs. Newman at once identified it as the woman she had seen throwing away the empty pocketbooks. Two policemen were assigned to the case and they arrested Yetta in the act of taking $5 from the handbag of Mrs. Maria Russo of No. 1764 Madison avenue. At least the policeman and Mrs. Russo swore to the theft.

Visualization of this Yetta of the many aliases through the police focus presented her in the guise of a port of feminine Jekyll and Hyde. At home, in the bosom of her large family she appears in the role of the capricious housewife and fond mother, providing her children with many luxuries, fitting out her apartments with all the comforts money can buy, dressing in rich silks and flashing the wealth of jewels from her long bony fingers.

Neighbors who have lived in close intimacy with this Mrs. Yetta Green for many years have been impressed by her seeming benevolence of character, hearing of her charities to those of her own race, and seeing her girded about by every evidence of respectability.

But this is not the Mrs. Yetta Green. Weiss-Lehman-Cohen-Schlesel, stilling out of the police courts any more than the courtly philanthropic and kind Mrs. Jekyll was the cringing, prowling brutal Mrs. Hyde. While no mystic drug induces in the transformation of this amazing woman, she manages to metamorphose herself by means of subtle disguises.

The police insist that it has always been her custom to maintain a furnished room near her luxurious homes in which she wrought her transformations, discarding her rich garments for the worn and threadbare clothing of the poor housewives of the squalid tenements, covering her head and shoulders with a shawl and carrying a dilapidated bag of the kind that are commonly seen in the thronged passageways of the east side.

DISGUISE MAKES IT EASY TO PREY UPON WOMEN.

The identity of the wealthy Mrs. Yetta Green is completely merged in this disguise, and she is able to glide about in the press of bargain-hunting marketeers without attracting the slightest attention. She possesses astounding cunning, say the detectives, and can spot in a flash the thrifty housewife who fears to leave her money or jewelry at home, carrying it outwards with her in pocket or handbag.

There has been no end of such victims of the nimble-fingered Yetta, declare the detectives, and for many years the neighborhoods she has haunted have rung with the complaints of the robbed. Before the last arrest of this so-called millionaire woman pickpocket Lieut. William J. Brown of the East One Hundred and Fourth street station received fifty complaints from women who said they had been robbed in Harlem stores within immediate radius of Mrs. Yetta Green's most recent home.

When she was arrested a week ago by Patrolmen Marchant and Walsh she was

JEWELRY GIFT-MONEY GOES FAR AT LAMBERTS

There is a great gathering of Diamond, Platinum and Gold Jewelry, Diamond and Gold Rings, Solid 14 and 18 karat Gold Watches, Gold-filled and Sterling Silver Watches and Silverware at Lamberts. Great in its extent, its variety, its quality, its artistic merit, its serviceable and durable character. Great above all in the surprising lowness of the prices asked for it.

Come and see it. You could not make gift money bring better value nor deeper satisfaction anywhere else in the country. Orders for engraving placed now secure the most careful attention, and there is no doubt of prompt delivery.

WE ARE IN THE MONTH BEFORE CHRISTMAS, and a reminder of Christmas jewelry gifts is not premature.

Yes, We Guarantee Diamonds, Too

Solitaire Diamond Engagement Rings we sell at almost any price you like between $10.00 and $1,500.00, and every one of them is a VALUE NOT TO BE MATCHED ANYWHERE ELSE. Whoever may lift an eyebrow at this statement is urged to compare our prices for diamonds with those of any other house. Only jewellers who bought diamonds in large quantities for spot cash, imported them direct and mounted them in their own factory could hope to compete with us, and mighty few are in a position to do it.

Diamond and Platinum Banquet Rings

Our new banquet rings have a general family likeness since they are aglitter with carefully chosen diamonds, set in all platinum mountings, at once novel and dignified in idea and strong in construction. We ask examination of these rings with all the more confidence, inasmuch as notwithstanding all their splendor, we make no departure from our rule of low prices in selling them.

Ten full-cut diamonds and a square-cut sapphire mounted by Lambert workmen in platinum, with gold shank, and the price is only $75.00.

The one in the centre is a delicate design, all platinum, with eleven diamonds whose radiance cannot, of course, be fairly represented in print. Looks like a very expensive ring. We sell it for $100.

What L. B. Means in Wedding Rings

The experience of many years is represented by the Lambert seamless Solid Gold Rings. Simple as they are, to produce them calls for special machinery, skillful hand work, solid gold and honest intentions. The initials "L. B." signify all these. Wedding Rings of all widths, shapes, styles. No Charge for Engraving.

14-Karat... $2.50 14-Karat... $3.50 14-Karat... $4.50 14-Karat... $5.50 14-Karat... $6.50 14-Karat... $7.50 14-Karat... $8.50 14-Karat... $9.50 14-Karat... $10.50 14-Karat... $11.50 14-Karat... $12.50 14-Karat... $13.50 14-Karat... $14.50 14-Karat... $15.50 14-Karat... $16.50 14-Karat... $17.50 14-Karat... $18.50 14-Karat... $19.50 14-Karat... $20.50 14-Karat... $21.50 14-Karat... $22.50 14-Karat... $23.50 14-Karat... $24.50 14-Karat... $25.50 14-Karat... $26.50 14-Karat... $27.50 14-Karat... $28.50 14-Karat... $29.50 14-Karat... $30.50 14-Karat... $31.50 14-Karat... $32.50 14-Karat... $33.50 14-Karat... $34.50 14-Karat... $35.50 14-Karat... $36.50 14-Karat... $37.50 14-Karat... $38.50 14-Karat... $39.50 14-Karat... $40.50 14-Karat... $41.50 14-Karat... $42.50 14-Karat... $43.50 14-Karat... $44.50 14-Karat... $45.50 14-Karat... $46.50 14-Karat